MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence
 THROUGH : CIA Management Committee
 FROM : Deputy Director for Management and Services
 SUBJECT : Dissemination of CIA Product to the Public

1. Action Requested: In response to your interest in making more of the Agency's product available to the public, this memorandum surveys the kinds of reports now receiving outside dissemination and explores opportunities for the expansion of the present program. Policy recommendations are then submitted for your approval.

2. Background: In reviewing MCA-60 (Subject: Proposal for Declassification and Release of Selected Agency Publications and Histories), the Management Committee noted that the DDI was already engaged in an extensive program to disseminate unclassified publications. The Committee observed, likewise, that the augmentation of this program by the reprocessing for release of previously published classified papers would tax resources and might stimulate requests for access, prejudicial to security. The Committee next directed that the DDM&S, with assistance from the DDI, prepare for consideration a policy paper on the release of publications in lieu of MCA-60.

The attached survey of information which the Agency now disseminates to the public confirms that there is an extensive program for the release of unclassified publications and that this program is located entirely within the DDI. Most of this information is generated as a by-product of [redacted]

STAT

The Agency also disseminates a substantial amount of information in the form of reference-type handbooks, such as the monthly listing of the Chiefs of State and other [redacted] compiled by the Central Reference Service (CRS) and made available to the public through DOCEX. Other reference aids are channeled through DOCEX by the DDI components which produce mostly finished intelligence, such as the economic data handbooks of the Office of Economic Research (OER) and the China Atlas prepared by the Office of Basic and Geographic Intelligence (OBGI), currently listed for sale in the catalogue of the Government Printing Office.

STAT

In contrast to these substantial programs for release to the public of unclassified documentary sources and reference aids, relatively little finished intelligence of the kind which involves both collation and significant degrees of analysis is made available for public dissemination at the present time. The most significant exceptions are the OER contributions to the reports of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, such as the recently published [redacted]

MCA-60 proposed that previously published finished intelligence reports be reprocessed for unclassified dissemination to the public. On further consideration it is believed that it would be more timely and less costly to assess the prospects for unclassified distribution when reports are scheduled for production. With such advance planning, more reports could probably be produced in unclassified form in the first place. Present technical facilities readily permit the publication of unclassified versions of reports, with nominal additional resource input, at the time that initial publication occurs. Augmentation of production efforts along these lines would expand significantly the present release of information to the public, would be in accord with the intent of the Freedom of Information Act, and would further your interest in a more forthcoming dissemination policy.

3. Recommendations: It is recommended that you endorse the continuation of the present extensive DDI program for the release to the public of unclassified source documents and reference aids which have been compiled primarily through the exploitation of foreign media. It is further recommended that you encourage the DDI and other components to explore opportunities to increase the dissemination of their analytical product to the public, both by the scheduling of unclassified finished reports and through the release of unclassified versions of finished reports at the time of initial publication.

SUBJECT : Release of Publications

REFERENCE : Your memo dtd 27 Nov 73, same subject

1. CRS releases on a regular basis unclassified biographic reference aids to the public through two channels:

a. The Document Expediting Project (DOCEX) of the Library of Congress--This release program has been in effect since February 1972. Up through September 1973, CRS released through DOCEX 44 publications, of which 20 are unique titles. OER also releases unclassified research aids through this program.

b. Direct mailing from the Printing Services Division to approximately 12 university libraries or professors--This program involves Soviet unclassified reference aids only. The program has been in effect since 1968. The mailing list was furnished to CRS by the DDI Coordinator for Academic Relations.

2. Per your request in the reference, lists of the titles of the CRS publications released through these channels during the period September 1971 through September 1973 are attached (Attachments A and B). A separate list of the OER unclassified research aids that have been released through DOCEX is also attached (Attachment C).
